

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

IN FAVOUR OF THE

SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND,

IN

INSTITUTED IN THE YEAR

1791.

" With the year
" Seasons return, but not to them returns
" Day, or the sweet approach of ev'n or morn,
" Or sight of vernal bloom, or summer's rose,
" Or flocks, or herds, or human face divine;
" But cloud instead, and ever-during dark
" Surround them, from the cheerful ways of men
" Cut off; and, for the book of knowledge fair,
" Presented with an universal blank
" Of nature's works, to them expung'd and ras'd,
" And wisdom at one entrance quite shut out."

It was particularly recommended to the committee, to use their utmost exertions to obtain donations for the purpose of completing the additional buildings, as all the friends of the Institution are convinced, that it can never attain that excellence of which it is capable, until the young pupils can reside in the house, under the immediate inspection of the Governors;

AND IT WAS ORDERED,

That another address should be made to the public in favour of the Charity, by a pamphlet, or by advertisement in the neighbouring provincial papers, in hopes, that when the public are apprized of the great importance of the ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS, and of the Contributions hitherto received, liberal as they have been, proving inadequate to complete and furnish them, and that the sum of from £2500 to £3000 is still wanted, such VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS may be received, as to enable the committee to complete this most desirable object.

ADDRESS.

THERE is perhaps no class of human beings, whose situation appears at first view more deplorable and irremediable, than that of the blind poor. Cut off from every means of occupation and amusement, their faculties became torpid and inactive. Those with whom they are compelled to associate, are unable to supply their minds with sources either of information or comfort, and during that portion of their time which they are condemned to pass in solitude, they are left to dwell upon the reflection, that through the whole of their existence, they must remain in their present helpless state, a burden to themselves and to their relations. It remained for the present age to discover a remedy for this evil. The hand of benevolence, guided by the suggestions of ingenuity, has at length succeeded in rendering these unfortunate objects no longer burdensome to society, has enabled them to become happy and useful, and has, in short, opened the eyes of the blind.

About twenty years have now elapsed since an attempt was made to afford relief to those persons who were labouring under the complicated misfortunes of poverty and blindness, by forming an institution where they might be cheered by conversation, and where, by being engaged in different occupations, their minds might be relieved from the fatigue of inactivity, at the same time that their labour might, in some degree, contribute to their support. The experiment of a few years proved that the object was not unattainable, and even the first efforts that were made were so far successful, as to meet with the decided approbation of the public. Increased experience has, however, enabled the managers of the institution to improve the nature of the establishment under their care, and as they extended their views, they have continued during each successive year to render it less of an asylum, where the ease and comfort of the blind were principally considered, and more approaching to a school, where they should be instructed in some useful art or trade, by which they might be enabled to procure for themselves a comfortable livelihood.

In so novel an undertaking, it might naturally be expected, that a considerable period of time must elapse before the plan could arrive at maturity. Many unsuccessful experiments would necessarily be made, and both time and expence would not improbably be lost in the attempt to accomplish objects, which were after all found to be unattainable. Some manufactures that were conceived to be peculiarly adapted to the management of persons deprived of sight, were upon trial found to prove less advantageous than was expected, and were at length abandoned. It has also happened in a few cases, that persons who have been admitted into the school, have, in consequence of bodily or mental incapacity, depending probably upon the same cause which produced their blindness, been unable to receive any useful instruction, and were under the necessity of returning to their friends. Notwithstanding, however, the occurrence of some circumstances of this nature, it may be confidently asserted, that the present state of the institution is highly gratifying to the friends of humanity, and that it has already produced more real service to those persons who have been the objects of its care, than could reasonably have been predicted. At the opening of the present school, in the spring of 1800, the number of pupils was increased to seventy, and since in 1809 to 100, the number at present in the school: they are all of them usefully employed, and they exhibit a picture of cheerfulness and comfort which can perhaps scarcely be paralleled by an equal number of individuals, of any description whatever, collected under the same roof. Few persons have for the first time been eye-witnesses of the scene which it presents, without shedding tears of sympathy and delight. Nor has their interest in the establishment been diminished by a more intimate acquaintance with it. To behold a number of our fellow-creatures, whose previous situation was so truly deplorable, become at the same time happy and useful, produces a sensation of heartfelt satisfaction which words are unable to express.

A circumstance, which at the same time that it is highly gratifying to the feelings of the committee, proves decidedly the favourable opinion which the public at large entertain of the benefits derived from the institution is, that five similar schools have been established on the plan of the one at Liverpool, viz.—in the cities of London, Dublin, Edinburgh, Bristol, and Norwich. The committee have embraced every opportunity of conveying information to the managers of those institutions; and they take this method of expressing their readiness to co-operate with them in any way, by which the welfare of those charities may be promoted:

The principal occupations of the pupils at present are,— spinning, hamper and basket making, the plaiting of sash line, the weaving of worsted rugs for hearths, carriages, and doors, of linen, and of floor cloth and sacking, the making of sacks and list shoes, the manufacturing of twine, pack thread, log lines, clothes lines, and fish lines, of stair carpeting, and of foot bears, points and gasketts from old ropes, and the learning of music. In this last department, the attention of the committee is principally directed to qualify the pupils for the office of organists, and they have so far succeeded, as to have already procured appointments of this kind for seventeen of the young men who have been educated at the school. The pupils are also instructed in the method of teaching music to others, and in tuning, quilling, and stringing musical instruments; by these means seven of the pupils, besides those who are organists, are enabled to procure for themselves a comfortable livelihood, and have met with very considerable encouragement. The committee think it may not be improper to remark, that the young men whom they educate for organists are, for the most part, qualified for teaching music, and for tuning musical instruments, a circumstance which, in country places particularly, may be an important advantage to the neighbourhood where they are introduced. Besides the means which are adopted to instruct the pupils in these several employments, a strict attention is paid to their moral and religious conduct. The health of the pupils is also made an object of especial care, and a medical committee is appointed to superintend and regulate all circumstances relating to it. This committee particularly direct their attention to the state of the eyes, and consider it their province to ascertain whether any means can be employed for the recovery of sight: it may be necessary to remark, that no operation of this kind is ever performed without the express consent of the parties and of their friends.

The first object of the governors in erecting buildings was to provide the pupils with a school, where they might spend a certain number of hours daily, and receive instruction in their several trades; and in the year 1800, a commodious building for this purpose was erected, principally from the contributions of the inhabitants of Liverpool. The pupils were lodged in different houses near the school, but although every care was taken to provide them with suitable accommodations, yet it was found, on many accounts, desirable to have them more under the immediate inspection of the governors. Every year afforded fresh proofs of the importance of accomplishing this object, and the committee were induced from the encouragement which they received from the public, to commence an extensive range of additional buildings, connected with the present school, in which those pupils, whose friends do not reside in Liverpool, may be lodged. The reasons for adopting this measure will, upon a little reflection, be sufficiently obvious, and it will be also evident, that the projected improvement is particularly desirable for the younger part of the scholars, who are in every respect the most eligible objects of the institution.

At present, after the hours of working are concluded, the pupils leave the school, and during the remainder of the evening they are entirely removed from the inspection of the Superintendent. Such a freedom from restraint must be dangerous to the morals of young persons, separated from their friends and natural connexions, and placed in the middle of a large and populous town. The committee indeed have to regret, that in a few instances they are but too well convinced of the evils that have arisen from the present imperfect system; they are therefore particularly happy to inform the friends of the institution, that the new buildings, which will secure every advantage that the governors have so long contemplated, are now in such a state of forwardness, as to afford reasonable hopes, that they may be finished and occupied in the course of the present summer, provided the contributions of the friends and patrons of the institution enable them to accomplish it within that period.

With respect to the inhabitants of Liverpool, who are eye-witnesses of the truly gratifying scene which this institution presents, the committee feel confident, that the above simple statement will be sufficient to ensure their cordial co-operation. As, however, the benefits of the charity are not in the least degree restricted to this town, the committee think it incumbent upon them to exhibit a statement of the present situation of the charity before the public, in expectation that they will gladly embrace this opportunity of contributing their share to the support of an institution, which extends its benefits in an equal degree over all parts of the country. The number of blind persons who have been received into the charity, since its first institution in 1791, is three hundred and eleven, of which seventy-one only have, belonged to Liverpool; of one hundred pupils now in the school, seventeen only belong to the parish of Liverpool, and of the remaining eighty-three, thirty-four only to the county of Lancaster, and forty-nine to other parts of the United Kingdom. Of these there are a few pupils who are entirely supported by their friends, and do not receive any wages; being placed there solely for the purpose of availing themselves of the advantages of the instruction to be received in the institution.

When the work-rooms in the new buildings were completed, the number of pupils in the school was increased to one hundred, and the committee had the gratification of seeing the list of candidates considerably reduced,—on that list there are still remaining sixty candidates, anxiously waiting to be admitted. It is scarcely necessary to remark, that this increased number of pupils has considerably augmented the annual expence of the establishment. Such, however, is the confidence which the committee feel in the liberality of the public, and so fully convinced are they of the favourable opinion which is entertained respecting the school, that they not only flatter themselves with the expectation of receiving the sum of money requisite for completing the buildings during the course of the present year, but they further rely upon such an augmentation of the subscriptions, as may annually meet the increased expences of the establishment.

By Order of the Committee.

N. B. The above Statement of the Amount of Goods Manufactured and Sold at the School, cannot fail to be highly interesting to the friends of the Institution. It is however necessary to remark, that the quantity of goods manufactured in any one year, is by no means a test of its prosperity at that particular period. The Institution professes not to be a Manufactory, but a School. The best pupils are constantly retiring, while others are admitted in their place, whose labour is for some time necessarily unproductive; and no advantage is derived from the labour of the musical pupils.

EXTRACTS

FROM THE RULES

OF THE

SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND.

THE pupils when they are first sent to the School are to be clothed, and are to be afterwards provided with necessaries at the expence of their friends. The committee will undertake to procure them in those cases where the friends of the pupils find it more convenient.

From the first of April, to the first of October, the pupils are required to be at the School, from 6 in the morning, until 6 in the evening; from 8 to 9 being allowed for breakfast, and from 12 to 1 for dinner.

From the first of October, to the first of April, they are required to attend at the School from 8 in the morning, one hour being allowed for dinner, and leave at half past 5 o'clock.

The female pupils leave the School at 5 in the evening, during the whole of the year.

The pupils assemble every morning and evening to join in public prayer; the names of those who are absent, are noted in a book kept for that purpose.

The pupils regularly attend both parts of the Sunday some place of public worship. Those who belong to establishment, assemble at the School every morning afternoon, a quarter of an hour before service time, and company the Superintendent and Matron to church.

The pupils who do not belong to the establishment required to bring certificates of their regular attendance their respective places of worship, from the ministers officiate at them.

The pupils attend at the School on a Sunday evening order to join in public prayer, and to be examined in catechism.

Strangers who visit the School are requested to observe, neither the Superintendent, Matron, nor any of the pupils permitted, on pain of Expulsion, to receive Money, or any Gratuity. The Superintendent is authorized to receive 1 factions and Annual Subscriptions; and Boxes are provided the reception of occasional Donations.

. Instances of irregularity which take place in the conduct of the pupils, are represented to the visitors or committee, adopt whatever measures they may think necessary to prevent recurrence. In those few cases where practices have been detected of a nature which it was apprehended might prove injurious the morals of the rest, the committee have thought it proper to return the parties offending to their friends.

LIVERPOOL SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND.

At a Meeting of the Committee of the Subscribers to the SCHOOL for the BLIND, in Liverpool, holden Friday, the 11th January, 1805,

IT WAS ORDERED,

" THAT persons who wish to recommend candidates for admission, are requested to observe, that no application can be attended to, unless accompanied with answers to the following QUERIES, addressed POST PAID, to Mr. JOSEPH BRAND, at the SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND, LIVERPOOL, and signed respectively by the several parties required, residing within the parish to which the candidate may belong."

From the numerous applications lately received for the admission of infants; and many persons having erroneously supposed, that the Blind were maintained by, boarded, and lodged in the charity;—it is deemed necessary again to repeat, that the funds are not yet sufficient to enable the committee to extend those advantages to the pupils, and that it is still merely a school for teaching them some useful art or trade, by which they may be enabled to earn their own livelihood; and that children of less than twelve years of age cannot be admitted into the school, excepting under very peculiar circumstances.

It is required that the pupils should be sent decently clothed to the school, and kept so at the expense of their friends or of the parishes to which they belong, during their continuance in the school.

From the trouble and inconvenience experienced by the committee, in obtaining the reimbursements of the weekly allowance of two shillings advanced by them, to several of the Blind, at the request of their friends, or of the parishes to which they belong;—IT IS ORDERED, that previous to the admission of any candidate in future, the friends or parishes from which such allowance is to be received, shall pay the first half year in advance, and engage some respectable inhabitant of Liverpool to become responsible to the committee for the payment, half-yearly, of such allowance always in advance, and also for the payment half-yearly of the necessaries with which they may have been supplied; and if the payments are not made within three months after the time when they ought to be made, notice will be given to the person who has been appointed to pay the same; and if they are not paid within three months from the time of the notice having been given, the pupil will be sent home.

QUERIES,

To be answered by the Minister, or by the Churchwarden or Overseer of the Parish, or by the Friends, or Person recommending the Candidate.

* Who is the person appointed in Liverpool to pay the parish or weekly allowance, and for necessaries which the pupil may be supplied with?
